

Guide to collaboration between the archive and higher education sectors

2018 updates

The Higher Education Archive Programme (HEAP) is The National Archives' continuing programme of engagement and support to help build stronger partnerships between higher education institutions and archive services.

As part of this programme, we developed a guide to collaboration between the two sectors. Originally developed alongside Research Libraries UK, this guidance has been refreshed, in partnership with History UK, to take into account key developments in the academic landscape.

View the full guidance at: nationalarchives.gov.uk/HEAP

Updates to the guide include:

New practical ways to identify, develop and sustain cross-sector collaborations

New archives and higher education sectors insights – drivers, initiatives, support, and language

Guidance on identifying organisational and project priorities

Explanations on how to understand outputs and outcomes

Guidance on measuring impact in cross-sector collaborations

An outline of recent updates to REF, TEF and Research Councils

Useful and innovative case studies from across the archives and higher education sectors

Improved presentation – making it easier to get started or search for the information you need
